1315-1600 Industry Perspective Working Groups

The working groups are an opportunity for industry and government to partner on global issues, congressional mandates, and executive decisions that upset the equilibrium between safety, security, commerce and the environment. Four working groups will continue to explore the topics raised in the morning's breakout sessions. This year, the goal of each working group is to produce four (4) questions which will be asked of the next day's Flag Panel. The four questions will address the issues of interest as decided by the group as a whole. Facilitators and Discussion Co-Leads will guide the discussions to ensure all sides of a topic are explored.

The Global Maritime Information Sharing Symposium (GMISS) is an opportunity for open and frank discourse between government and industry. The “Flag Panel” session will include five senior US government officials who will participate in an unrehearsed discussion on MDA. The two hour session will begin with five minute opening statements from each participant. The moderator will then present the questions developed by Wednesday’s working groups, followed by an open Q&A with GMISS attendees. The Flag Panel offers GMISS attendees the opportunity to converse with senior US government officials, examine the previous two days’ finding, and express viewpoints directly to senior leaders in MDA. Senior USG leadership will hear, unfiltered, the problems that the maritime industry is confronted with as the USG continuously strives for the right balance between safety, security, commerce, and environment.
