

AWARD NOMINATION FORM

The James Forrestal Industry Leadership Award

The award is named in honor of Forrestal, a former Navy secretary and Defense secretary known for his leadership and outspoken advocacy of a robust and responsive defense industrial base during the painful, early years of post-WWII demobilization.

The Forrestal award is bestowed annually on a defense industry executive who best reflects Forrestal's vision, leadership, and staunch support of a strong industrial base.

AWARD NOMINEES MUST:

- Be a U.S. citizen
- Have had strategic impact and leadership at the national level
- Be a leader in support of the military services, other security-related agencies, and warfighters
- Be an active supporter of the defense industrial base and its programs
- Be a leader in defining and addressing issues of the industrial base and national security
