

PROFILE

As a leader in the Department of the Navy's Acquisition Workforce for over 15 years, Jim has continued this leadership in the private sector for the past four years and counting.

With his proven record of success and results oriented perspective, he has demonstrated high performance and best value across international challenges from missile defense to counter IED threats. His strong background in classified system integration, weapon system architecture, and international policy has solved problems for U.S. leaders. He has also advised dozens of leaders across the world, among more than 40 countries and international partners, where Jim personally coordinated international maritime solutions for local and regional security problems.
