PROCUREMENT

WHO WE ARE

The Procurement Division is a key component of NDIA's Policy Team, which monitors and advances sound and practical procurement/acquisition policies on matters that affect government/industry relationships relating to this important process. The Division ensures that government obtains requisite supplies and services at an equitable price with the least possible disruption of industrial practices. Accordingly, the Division maintains a close working relationship with government and industry agencies while conducting special studies to provide government with industry perspectives on policies, practices, needs, and problems. In addition to offering members the opportunity to sit on industry/government committees, the Division engages in the preparation and filing of amicus curiae briefs before the appeals courts and the U.S. Supreme Court.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING

ZOOMGOV

The NDIA has a policy of strict compliance with federal and state antitrust laws. The antitrust laws prohibit competitors from engaging in actions that could result in an unreasonable restraint of trade. Consequently, NDIA members must avoid discussing certain topics when they are together at formal association membership, board, committee, and other meetings and in informal contacts with other industry members: prices, fees, rates, profit margins, or other terms or conditions of sale (including allowances, credit terms, and warranties); allocation of markets or customers or division of territories; or refusals to deal with or boycotts of suppliers, customers or other third parties, or topics that may lead participants not to deal with a particular supplier, customer or third party.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER

STEPHEN AMBROSE

Chief Climate Scientist
SAIC

Over the course of his career, Stephen D. Ambrose has served as a meteorologist, physical scientist, and program manager in the federal and private sector. He has directed teams in the development of science and technology research as well as reapplications in Earth Science. He now serves as Chief Climate Scientist at SAIC. His research and application interests include: natural disaster reduction; climate data and information, and implications of a changing climate on people, ecosystems, and the planet.

From 1978 to 2014 he worked for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), the Department of Interior Fish and Wildlife Service and antecedent agencies. After years of work related to meteorology, climatology, and oceanography at the National Ocean Service, National Weather Service, and the National Environmental Satellite Data and Information Service, he joined the Department of Interior Fish and Wildlife Service as Director of the National Wetlands Inventory Center. From there, he joined NASA as Program Executive for Disasters in the Science Mission Directorate encouraging applications of NASA's cadre of satellite and airborne missions towards decision support systems for government and private industry. In 2008 he was awarded NASA's Exceptional Achievement Medal for efforts responding to the nation's weather and wildfire disasters. He retired from civil service in 2014 as NOAA's Data Operations Manager in the development of their geostationary satellite ground system supporting satellite ingest and product generation.

From 2014 to now, he worked in the private sector as Program Manager and Director supporting NOAA, NASA, and the EPA missions in operations, research and development. This included working at NASA's Center for Climate Simulation developing services to access downscaled climate information and utilizing NASA's supercomputer cloud services to support Arctic climate research. At NOAA's Office of Oceanic and Atmospheric Research, he led a program of over 50 specialists, analysts and scientists supporting the Climate Program Office, Sea Grant, the Weather Program Office, and the Un-crewed Systems Research office. In 2018, joining Woolpert, a geospatial and architecture firm as Program Director for Government Solutions, he supported the firm's work with critical infrastructure, natural disasters, GIS, and information systems. Lastly, joining General Dynamics Information Technology in late 2019, he led a group of scientists and engineers at the EPA, supporting research and development in geographic information, environmental protection, chemical analysis, and disaster resilience.

Now at SAIC, he leads the growth of SAIC Climate Enterprise supporting federal, industry, state, and local customers as well as utilizing SAIC's deep experience in science and technology for solutions to benefit society.

He received a B.S. in General Physical Sciences that included meteorology, geology, and astronomy from the University of Maryland in 1977, and undertook graduate studies in geography and climatology at the University of Maryland, Geography Department from 1981 to 1985.
